

360° garage

By Matt Wildee Photography Rory Game

Triumph guru Clive Wood runs a workshop to rival many a main dealer. And all from his single garage in Bognor Regis

Outside of Triumph's headquarters, Clive Wood is probably Britain's leading expert of the marque. The Bognor Regis-based mechanic has been racing and modifying British sportsbikes for three decades. But after running the Jack Lilley Triumph squad in various British Championships in the 90s and early 2000s, he decided to concentrate on servicing, repairing and modifying roadbikes.

And he runs the business from this single garage and a couple of store rooms in his unassuming estate house. Clive's bread and butter is offering main-dealer levels of servicing at a fraction of the cost and his workshop is an immaculate tribute to order and clever engineering. Everything he's set up in his own garage (literally) is applicable to what anyone can do in their workshop at home.
